General information about cookies

To make our services as attractive and relevant as possible, we use so-called cookies. Cookies are tiny text files that enable us to make your experience more efficient by, for example, analysing how you use the website in order to show you personalised content and offers. As a rule, cookies do not contain personal data and are not coupled with such data. We use different types of cookies (see below). Some cookies are set by third parties that appear on our sites. It is possible that these third parties couple the collected information with other data which users have already provided to them, and this may enable them to identify the users. We advise you to read their privacy notices before using their services.

You can change your preferences for accepting cookies at any time through the cookie consent tool (Cookie Banner).

- Necessary cookies help to make a website work by enabling access to basic functions such as page navigation and access to safe areas of the website. The website cannot operate properly without these cookies.
- Preference cookies enable a website to remember information that influences the way it behaves and appears, for example, the preferred language or the region where the visitor is located.
- Statistical cookies help websites owners to understand how visitors interact with their websites by anonymously collecting and reporting information.
- Marketing cookies are used to track visitors on websites. The intention is to show advertisements that are relevant and appealing to individual users and thus more valuable for publishers and third party advertisers.
